CHOICE WORDS: Thousands of people carrying signs walk down Pennsylvania Avenue on Sunday during an abortion-rights rally and march. The rally, which focused on protecting women's reproductive rights, included women and men from across the country, along with activists from nearly 60 countries.

Women's Rally Floods Mall

At least 500,000 march to protest Bush's abortion policies

WASHINGTON | Abortion-rights supporters flooded the National Mall in the hundreds of thousands Sunday, galvanized by what they see as an erosion of reproductive freedoms under President Bush.

The rally stretched from the base of the U.S. Capitol about a mile back to the Washington Monument. Various police sources informally estimated the throng at between 500,000 and 800,000 strong.

"You will hear our pro-choice voices ringing in your ears until such time that you permit all women to make our own reproductive choices," declared Francis Kissling of Catholics for a Free Choice.

The throngs gathered by the Washington Monument for opening speeches and set off along Pennsylvania Avenue, slowly looping back to the Mall near the Capitol.

A much smaller contingent of abortion opponents assembled along the route to protest what they called a "death march." Police used barricades and a heavy presence at that site to keep it from becoming a flashpoint.

Demonstrators joined the protest from nearly 60 countries, asserting that damage from Bush's policies is spreading far beyond U.S. shores through measures such as the ban on federal money for family-planning groups that promote or perform abortions abroad.

Feminist Gloria Steinem accused Bush of taking positions so socially conservative that he seems, she said, to be in league with the likes of Muslim extremists or the Vatican.

Democratic Sen. Hillary Clinton, referring to the 1973 Supreme Court decision legalizing abortion, said the administration is "filled with people who ... consider Roe v. Wade the worst abomination of constitutional law in our history." ELIZABETH WOLFE (AP)

CRIME | One For the Road Minutes after a bank heist in Huntington Beach, Calif., the alleged robber walked into a bar and ordered himself a beer. But Ronald Langdale, 58, of Los Angeles only got to drink half of his Budweiser draft before police arrested him,

The Orange County Register reported. The Bank of America that Langdale allegedly robbed is in the same strip mall as the bar, and he had the loot with him in a white plastic bag, Sgt. Mike Mello said. Langdale was arrested without a struggle. (AP) EyeOpeners | Page 2

Virgil and Velma Randall of McRae, Ark., know how to give the people what they want — and what they want is to gawk at flying pigs. The Randalls' High Diving Racers, including plunging pig Sweet Georgia Brown pictured here, delighted audiences Saturday at Arkansas's Bentonville Barbecue Competition, The Morning News newspaper reported. ## HOME REPAIR Wrong Roof

Loraine Stout of Vienna, W.Va., returned home last week to find a crew preparing to install a new roof. Problem was, she didn't order one. Stout, who had a new roof put on her home a year ago, came back from her out-of-town business trip and found nails, shingles and other debris all over her yard. Turns out the crew had the right street address, but not the right road. The intended customer was a few houses away on another street. The roofers reattached the shingles they'd removed, but Stout claims a section will still have to be redone because some of the shingles were scuffed or torn. (AP)

Dave isn't a counselor's typical client, but Cortney Anderson says she still has a few things to learn from him. Anderson, a student from Pickens, S.C., met with Dave — a horse on the Seven Gables Farm in Landrum, S.C. — on Saturday as part of her counseling and human services program at Greenville Technical College. According to Anderson, she's working with horses as a kind of training program, aimed at testing out her basic actions and instincts that will help her sharpen skills she'll need as a counselor working with a new client. ### They've Got a Beef

A Salt Lake City couple on the Atkins Diet are battling with a local restaurant after being booted from the buffet for eating too much meat. Isabelle Leota, 29, and her husband Sui Amaama, 26, both on the low-carb diet, were dining Tuesday at a Chuck-A-Rama in the Salt Lake City suburb of Taylorsville when the manager cut them off because they'd eaten too much roast beef.

Offended by the order, the couple argued with the manager, then asked for a refund. The manager refused, and when the couple refused to leave, he called police. The couple said they won't return to the restaurant. (AP)

World Officials Pledge More Support for Poverty Battle

World finance ministers promised on Sunday to do more to deal with the crushing burden of global poverty, promising help in such areas as education, debt relief and AIDS. But activists said the weekend meetings of the 184-nation International Monetary Fund and World Bank failed to back up the warm words with cold cash.

Finance ministers from the world's seven wealthiest countries endorsed a proposal to promote economic development in the Middle East, specifically mentioning the Palestinian areas of the West Bank and Gaza along with Iraq and Afghanistan. (AP)

Divers joined the search Sunday for a 2-year-old boy missing in a creek since a pickup driven by his mother was swept off a bridge by flooding also blamed for three other deaths. Rural roads were flooded in many Arkansas counties as a slowly moving storm system drenched the state. (AP)

Cost of Security Draining Iraq Funds

Up to a quarter of reconstruction money spent fighting violence

WASHINGTON | Because of the surging violence, U.S.-financed contractors rebuilding Iraq are spending a quarter of their money to protect workers and insure their projects, according to American officials monitoring the work.

Coupled with the current instability, the siphoning of resources from reconstruction to security is slowing work on projects like building roads and refurbishing electric plants, the officials said.

President Bush and Congress approved $87 billion last fall for the war in Iraq and Afghanistan. That included $18.4 billion to restore Iraq's economy and government by repairing and building facilities and training Iraqis.

Stuart W. Bowen Jr., inspector general for the Coalition Provisional Authority, cited estimates that contractors were spending 10 to 15 percent of their money for security costs earlier this year.

That figure "could go as high as 25 percent" due to the recent anti-American violence, said Bowen. The provisional authority is the U.S.-led agency that has been administering Iraq since the downfall of Saddam Hussein.

In what officials fear could be a vicious cycle, the slowdown in the work means fewer jobs and essential services for the Iraqi people. That, in turn, could feed the dissatisfaction that has helped spawn hostility toward the American occupiers.

Senators to Hold Marriage Hearings

WASHINGTON | Senate Republicans this week will launch a series of hearings to promote the value of traditional marriage, a move some Democrats are calling an election-year ploy that is none of Congress' business.

According to a GOP memo obtained by The Associated Press, the hearings by four committees will represent a "full-court push to educate the public on the importance of marriage." (AP)

Judges Warned About Gay Marriages

Mass. governor says officials must follow same-sex union law

BOXBORO, MASS. | Gov. Mitt Romney's top legal counsel told the state's justices of the peace Sunday to resign if they are unwilling to preside over same-sex marriages beginning next month.

Daniel Winslow said Romney expects the justices to comply with the law, even though the Republican governor opposes gay marriage and has sought to delay its court-ordered legalization on May 17.

"Gov. Romney understands and respects that people have very strong personal views both for or against same-gender marriage," Winslow told justices gathered to learn about the impending changes. "But on this point, the law is clear."

The Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court ruled in November

the state must begin issuing marriage licenses to same-sex couples by mid-May, which means changes for clerks and justices of the peace.

Refusing to marry gay couples could leave justices individually liable and raises the possibility of punitive damages in court, said David Fried, enforcement chief for the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination, who also addressed the gathering.

Gas Price Hike Continues

Record-high costs to rise another 3 cents per gallon, survey says

LOS ANGELES | U.S. gasoline prices climbed 3 more cents per gallon in the past two weeks because of high crude oil prices, tight capacity and rising demand, an analyst said Sunday.

The nationwide average for all gasoline grades, including taxes, was nearly $1.86 per gallon on Friday, up 3.07 cents from April 9, according to the Lundberg Survey of 8,000 stations nationwide.

The average price "has broken all-time record highs for two months straight," analyst Trilby Lundberg said. However, when adjusted for inflation, she said, it remained about $1 a gallon lower than the peak of March 1981.

Since Dec. 19, the average gas price has risen 34.55 cents, she said.

The latest increase was prompted by crude oil prices topping $36 per barrel coupled with OPEC production cuts and a growth in crude oil demand, Lundberg said.

Demand for gasoline also is growing, thanks to an improving economy, while refinery capacity is tight and new federal rules for formulating less-polluting gasoline add to the cost, she said.

Lundberg said it was impossible to know if prices will continue to increase, but "it seems more likely than not" as the peak summer travel season approaches.

The national weighted average price of gasoline, including taxes, at self-serve pumps Friday was about $1.83 for regular, $1.92 for mid-grade and $2.01 for premium. ROBERT JABLON (AP)

Jackson Replaces Team of Lawyers

LOS ANGELES | Michael Jackson is replacing high-profile attorneys Mark Geragos and Benjamin Brafman in his child molestation case, the lawyers told the Associated Press on Sunday.

The pop superstar's new lawyer will be Thomas Mesereau Jr., another well-known criminal defense attorney who represented actor Robert Blake in his murder case until they recently parted company.

"Based on recent developments and discussions with various persons in the Jackson camp, it became clear that it would be best if Mark and I decided to step down," Brafman said. "And that's what we elected to do."

He added, "We both wish Michael well."

Mesereau declined to answer questions Sunday. "I'll have no comment on the developments until I appear in court Friday," he said.

Jackson's spokeswoman,

Raymone K. Bain, said she was unaware of the change when asked about it by a reporter.

Jackson's case moved into a new phase last week when a grand jury secretly indicted him on child molestation charges. Contents of the indictment are not yet known.

The indictment means that a grand jury has decided there is probable cause to hold Jackson for trial.

Jackson is free on $3 million bail and recently has been staying at a Florida compound with his children. LINDA DEUTSCH (AP)

U.S. Moves Gingerly in Iraq

Troops try to reassert control without stirring violence on two fronts

FALLUJAH, IRAQ | U.S. troops will begin patrols with Iraqi security forces in Fallujah, the military said Sunday, as the United States backed down from warnings of an all-out assault on the city.

The patrols are to begin as early as Tuesday, and Fallujah officials will announce in the city that anyone seen carrying a weapon will be considered hostile, the military said.

The deal to return to patrols meant extending the city's fragile cease-fire two more days. Military action was still an option, Brig. Gen. Mark Kimmitt said, but the warning was dramatically toned down from those in the past week.

Meanwhile, Brig. Gen. Mark Hertling said troops will move into a base near Najaf that Spanish troops will abandon when they withdraw from Iraq. But the Americans will remain away from the city's holy sites, he said — an effort to avoid outraging Iraq's Shiite majority.

Hertling said the troops aimed to "counter the forces" of radical Shiite cleric Muqtada al-Sadr. "It's not going to be large-scale fighting," he said. But "we're going to drive this guy into the dirt."

The measures in Fallujah and Najaf appeared aimed at bringing a degree of control over the cities without re-igniting the intense violence that began when U.S. authorities moved on the two fronts simultaneously at the start of April. (AP)

Israelis Say Sharon Has No Plans to Kill Arafat

JERUSALEM | Israeli leaders on Sunday backed away from Prime Minister Ariel Sharon's latest threats against Yasser Arafat, saying there are no immediate plans to kill the Palestinian leader.

Sharon declared in a television interview over the weekend that he is no longer bound by a promise to the United States not to harm Arafat, who has been confined to his West Bank compound for two years.

The comments, which drew a sharp rebuke from Washington, raised speculation that Arafat might be in Israel's crosshairs. In recent weeks, Israel has killed two top figures of the Hamas militant group.

However, Israeli Vice Premier Ehud Olmert and Cabinet minister Gideon Ezra said Sharon has no plans to expel or assassinate Arafat. "The prime minister doesn't intend to carry out anything next week or today or tomorrow," Olmert said.

Arafat greeted 400 Palestinian children at his headquarters in Ramallah Sunday. Speaking to reporters afterward, Arafat said he is not afraid to die. "Our destiny is to be martyrs in this holy land," he said. (AP)

In Japan, Koizumi's Party Wins 3 Seats In Important Vote

TOKYO | Prime Minister Junichiro Koizumi's ruling party snapped up all three parliamentary seats in by-elections Sunday, marking a solid victory for the leader in the first electoral test since a hostage crisis cast a shadow over Japan's role in Iraq.

The voting for three vacancies in the 480-seat lower house of Parliament was considered a preview of a major electoral battle looming in July in the legislature's upper chamber.

The wins boost the Liberal Democratic Party's lower house seats to 245 and its already comfortable coalition majority to 279. (AP)

Chinese Bracing for SARS

4 new suspected cases in Beijing revive fears of another outbreak

BEIJING | Evoking bad memories of last year's outbreak, China announced Sunday it was investigating four fresh suspected SARS cases in its capital and ordered an affected southern province to gird for a coming holiday when millions of Chinese will be traveling.

All of the new suspected cases have been traced back to a single patient, the government said, suggesting the problem was still tightly confined and not a general outbreak.

Nevertheless, the announcement issued by the Ministry of Health on its Web site was an alarming reminder that the disease that killed 349 people in China during last year's outbreak still poses a threat despite efforts by the government to prevent its return.

The latest four cases brought the total in China for the past week to two confirmed and six suspected. The new suspected cases are the father, mother, aunt and roommate of a 20-year-old confirmed SARS patient in Beijing, the ministry said. The other confirmed case is a 26-year-old medical student in the southern province of Anhui.

SARS, or severe acute respiratory syndrome, first emerged in southern China's Guangdong Province in November 2002. It triggered a global health crisis, killing 774 people around the world and infecting more than 8,000.

The Chinese government came under fire internationally for initially being slow to publicize information about the disease. It has vowed to be more open. TED ANTHONY (AP)

EU Looking for Ways to Assist Turkish Cypriots

Europeans to reward north for supporting failed unification plan

KYRENIA, CYPRUS | Disappointed and angry after Greek Cypriots rejected a U.N. plan to reunite Cyprus, the European Union pledged to start searching for ways to extend a hand of friendship to the island's long-ostracized Turkish side.

The U.N. reunification plan required agreement from both sides of the island. But Greek Cypriots overwhelmingly rejected it and Turkish Cypriots endorsed it in referendums on Saturday. That means Cyprus will not join the EU on May 1 as a united state and that EU laws and benefits will apply only to the Greek Cypriot side.

"What we will seriously consider now is finding a way to end the economic isolation of the Turkish Cypriots," said Guenter Verheugen, the EU commissioner for expansion.

Legally, the Turkish side of Cyprus can only trade with Turkey, the only country that recognizes it as a separate state. Cyprus has been divided into a Greek Cypriot-controlled south and a Turkish-occupied north since Turkey invaded in 1974 following a coup by supporters of union with Greece. (AP)

Afghan President Offers to Reseat All but 150 Taliban

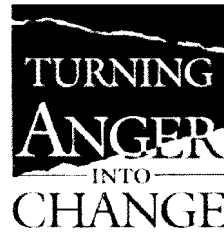

KANDAHAR, AFGHANISTAN | Afghan President Hamid Karzai returned Sunday to a Taliban stronghold where he was nearly assassinated 19 months ago, and said he would welcome rank-and-file members of the militia back into society.

But Karzai said about 150 leaders of the ultra-religious Islamic movement supplanted by his government after a U.S.-led war are unworthy of rehabilitation and could be prosecuted.

The president has said in the past that he believed most Taliban could be reintegrated back into society, but this appeared to be the first time he put a number on those the nation sought to prosecute.

The idea of reintegrating less radical elements of the Taliban has been floated for months, and the notion appears to have Washington's support. NOOR KHAN (AP)

Women's March: 'A Huge Success'

Police make 17 arrests, but report no violence during demonstration

WASHINGTON | Hundreds of thousands of abortion rights protesters gathered Sunday on the National Mall in what's being called one of the largest demonstrations in years in the nation's capital.

Unofficially, police estimated about 800,000 people joined the March for Women's Lives. There was some verbal sparring with abortion opponents along the march route, but no violence was reported.

"It seems to be a huge success," said U.S. Park Police spokesman Sgt. Scott Fear.

Park Police arrested without incident 16 anti-abortion demonstrators for demonstrating without a permit, and a man for disorderly conduct, for allegedly throwing plastic eggs filled with ink at a sign, Fear said.

Hundreds of thousands of people filled the Mall on Sunday for the rally.

Metrorail carried more than 320,000 people as of 5 p.m. — about two and a half times more than last Sunday, said spokesman Steven Taubenkibel. Despite crowding at some stations, it was a "very smooth day today" without major delays or incidents, he said. (AP)

Metro Toilets Flush With Success

WASHINGTON | Thousands have found relief in the months since rail station bathrooms and a high-tech portable toilet were opened to the public, Metro officials plan to tell board members in a report to be presented next month.

The one-year, $109,000 test program for the self-cleaning toilet has gone so well, board member Dana Kauffman, of Fairfax County, Va., said, that he wants the device relocated to the Orange Line's Vienna Station — one of five stops where station bathrooms aren't available to the public because of security concerns.

Officials said in the report that 1,600 riders were allowed to use station restrooms from January through mid-March. Public use resulted in five police responses and 14 responses by janitors.

Metro's board must decide whether to continue to lease the high-tech toilet, installed in October at the Yellow Line's Huntington Station. In March, it was used an average of nearly 85 times a day.

Board Chairman Robert Smith, of Maryland, said he'd just prefer to let the lease expire: "I don't think I'll ever be able to reconcile ... paying for a one-room toilet more money than I paid for my three-bedroom house," he said. DANNY FREEDMAN (EXPRESS)

SINCE YOU ASKED

Q Why did Metro decide to remove the new seat cushions in the end rows of the new rail cars and, in their place, put in the old ugly yellow seats from the old rail cars? The well-worn yellow seat cushions clash with the new colors and take away from what should be an enjoyable experience of riding in a new rail car.

A Well, get used to it. The three seat colors are not only the look of this group of new rail cars, they'll also grace the next shipment of new cars and are being put on 364 older cars now being rehabilitated, Metro spokesman Steven Taubenkibel said.

The colors were approved by Metro's board, and the idea was to have seats with colors representative of the region, said Pat Porzillo, chief engineer in the department of operations. "I think it looks pretty good," he said.

The colors are Potomac blue for the District, colonial burgundy for Virginia and Chesapeake sand for Maryland (the yellow ones).

For the record, the yellow seats are actually new, not transplants from old cars, Taubenkibel said.

Gibbs Pleased With Redskins' Draft

Team picks up 2 linemen with late-round choices

NFL DRAFT | There were no head-scratching selections, no baffling statements by the head coach. Joe Gibbs's return to the Washington Redskins included a clinical exercise in how to conduct an NFL draft: Do your homework, choose rationally and don't gloat when things go right.

The Redskins used their top pick on the unglamorous position of safety, getting exactly the player Gibbs targeted to fill a need while passing over the higher-profile splash of Kellen Winslow Jr.

With Sean Taylor of the University of Miami in tow with the No. 5 overall pick, the Redskins then traded up late Saturday to get promising tight end Chris Cooley of Utah State in the third round. On Sunday, they completed their draft by taking a pair of offensive linemen: Mark Wilson from California in the fifth round and Jim Molinaro from Notre Dame in the sixth.

"Always, when you look at all that talent and everything, you're wishing you could get a lot more players," Gibbs said. "But to be truthful, we think that we maximized our opportunities for what we had."

Gibbs's meticulous approach in his first draft in 12 years was a welcome relief after two drafts with Steve Spurrier, who wasn't as active in the process and sometimes seemed to know little about the players being picked.

Taylor, who arrives Monday for his introductory news conference, should be an instant starter at free safety, where his speed and aggressiveness will strengthen pass coverage and help the players in front of him to stop the run.

MEET THE COACH: Head coach Joe Gibbs shakes hands with some of the thousands of fans who went to the Redskins draft party at FedEx Field on Saturday.

Wilson started all 48 games for the Golden Bears and played both tackle positions, demonstrating the durability Gibbs wanted for a backup along the offensive line. Molinaro is more of a long-term project to be molded by offensive coach Joe Bugel.

Martinez Leads Red Sox to Sweep Over Yankees

BASEBALL | Six months after the American League Championship Series, Pedro Martinez and the Boston Red Sox held on against the Yankees and completed a weekend blowout in the Bronx.

Martinez pitched seven crisp innings and Manny Ramirez hit a two-run homer off Javier Vazquez, leading the Red Sox to a 2-0 win Sunday and their first series sweep of New York since 1999.

Boston, the AL East leader, extended New York's losing streak to a season-high four. It has won six of seven from New York this year.

New York fell 4 1/2 games back of the AL East lead for the first time since May 10, 2002, according to the Elias Sports Bureau. At 8-11, the Yankees are three games under .500 this late in the season for the first time since April 22, 1997. (AP)

Lawyer Denies Olympian Jones Received Steroids

DOPING | An attorney for Marion Jones rejected reports the Olympic track star received steroids from a California nutritionist.

The San Francisco Chronicle and the San Jose Mercury News, both quoting anonymous sources, reported Sunday that nutritionist Victor Conte told federal agents he gave performance-enhancing substances to Jones, fellow track star Tim Montgomery and other top athletes.

Jones's lawyer, Joseph Burton, said Sunday that the five-time medalist at the 2000 Olympics never received steroids from Conte, the founder of the Bay Area Laboratory Co-Operative, the supplements firm at the center of a large steroids scandal. (AP)

Malone's 30 points lead Lakers to overtime victory over Rockets

NBA PLAYOFFS | On a day when the Houston Rockets nearly evened things up by shutting Los Angeles down, Karl Malone's best game of the playoffs — and perhaps the entire season — helped move the Lakers within one victory of the second round.

With the intensity level taking a decided tick upward and the distaste between the coaches taking a foul-mouthed turn, the 40-year-old Malone had 30 points and 13 rebounds while playing with the energy of someone half his age.

The last of Malone's three steals, along with his second offensive rebound, put the finishing touches on the Lakers' 92-88 overtime victory Sunday for a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven series.

Game 5 will be Wednesday night, with the Rockets trying to stay alive in the series. CHRIS SHERIDAN (AP) and Jermaine O'Neal had 18 on Sunday to lead the Indiana Pacers to a 90-75 win over the Boston Celtics and give them a 4-0 victory in the best-of-seven series. It's Indiana's first victory in a play-off series after three consecutive first-round losses. The Pacers advance to the Eastern Conference semifinals and thanks to the sweep, they will have more than a week to rest. (AP)

In Brief

HOCKEY*Long Lockout Would Keep NHL Stars Out of Olympics

The 2006 Winter Olympics will be played without National Hockey League players unless a new collective bargaining agreement between the NHL and its players is in place by next January, international ice hockey's chief said Sunday. "It's quite clear from what [NHL commissioner] Gary [Bettman] has told us that if they're not playing in January [2005], they're not coming to Torino," International Ice Hockey Federation president Rene Fasel said. A lengthy lockout is widely expected in view of the current deadlock between the NHL and the NHL Player's Association. (AP)

AUTO RACING*Gordon Gets First Win of Year

Jeff Gordon seized the lead from Dale Earnhardt Jr. with six laps remaining and barely beat him in a controversial finish Sunday at Talladega Superspeedway in Alabama. With Earnhardt making a strong move to pass for the lead on lap 184 of the 188-lap Aaron's 499, rookie Brian Vickers and Casey Mears collided, sending Vickers sliding and bringing out the 11th caution flag of the race. Under NASCAR's rule change from last fall, freezing the field when the yellow comes out rather than letting the competitors race to the flagstand, Gordon got his first Nextel Cup victory of the season. (AP)

NHL PLAYOFFS | LIGHTNING STRIKES

FROZEN: Montreal Canadiens goalie Jose Theodore watches Tampa Bay Lightning center Vincent Lecavalier (4) as he approaches the net to score on a breakaway goal in the second period of their NHL Eastern Conference semifinal game on Sunday. Tampa won 3-1 to take a 2-0 lead in the series.

TODAY'S TV LINEUP

BASEBALL (7 p.m. on Comcast) Ichiro Suzuki leads the Seattle Mariners to Baltimore for a series starting Monday.

PRO BASKETBALL (7 p.m. on TNT) Milwaukee tries to even its series with Detroit at 2-2 during Game 4 of the first round playoff series.

PRO BASKETBALL (9:30 p.m. on TNT) Dallas looks to build off Saturday's blowout

Steal this Job Fast Track | Metro Event Planner

TIA FOSSETT, 28

JOB: Manager of events, employee programs and community outreach at Metro

SALARY: $60,000 to $80,000

EDUCATION: Bachelor's of business administration in marketing

WHAT SHE DOES: Fossett and her team of three plan and execute all of Metro's media and ceremonial events, such as the openings of three new rail stations later this year. She sets up catering, takes care of VIPs and coordinates with Metro's many departments. "There are 10,000 employees at Metro and, I swear, I have to work with about 8,000."

WOULD YOU WANT HER JOB? "You just have to be prepared for anything," warns Fossett, who carries bottled water, pliers, a wrench, tape, scissors and a box cutter, just in case. During budget crunches, she cut cake (and sliced it thin) in the absence of a caterer and brought in her own Christmas decorations.

HOW YOU CAN GET HER JOB: The best training for event planners is the hospitality industry, since hotels are "a one-stop shop" for catering, sales and audio-visual services (Fossett previously worked for Marriott).

Boomers Go About Their Businesses

ENTREPRENEURS | Millions of baby boomers have discovered unexpected freedom as entrepreneurs. According to a recent AARP survey, 40 percent of all people in business for themselves in the U.S. are older than 50, with that percentage rising in recent years.

Boomers are finding two avenues that don't require starting from whole cloth — franchising and consulting. Franchising provides a support system in the form of the franchiser's guidance and a network of other franchise owners, while consulting allows the newly self-employed to make use of his or her existing skills.

Boomers seeking to work for themselves should make sure they have a comfortable nest egg, at least a year's salary or more, to live off while they start the business. A spouse or partner who has health insurance can help defray those costs. MICHAEL J. MARTINEZ (AP)

Prime Rib-Time TV

The Food Network serves up course after course of specialty shows

TASTY TV | So much to gain! So little to lose! That's the message at Food Network, which promotes cooking and eating as a source of rich reward with negligible risk.

Or in the words of Food Network president Judy Girard: "Most dishes are hard to screw up, so have courage. It will probably turn out fine."

A few months into its second decade, the network has dined out with this recipe in genres that include how-to series along with travel ("FoodNation with Bobby Flay"), makeovers ("Ultimate Kitchens"), deconstructive analysis ("Good Eats") and even game shows.

The last is represented this weekend by "Iron Chef America," a cooking duel that's campy, suspenseful and mouth-watering — the show displays kitchen masters at the top of their game (and their imaginations: Would you believe trout ice cream?).

But in the Food Network studio recently, a different kind of cuisine-by-the-clock is under way.

In a coolly retro kitchen, casually clad Rachael Ray is taping a segment of her "30 Minute Meals" series. Ray brought her dazzling smile and breezy style to Food Network three years ago.

Here's primavera orzo (10 minutes, then 15 more for cooking), and for dessert, sorbet eggs (10 minutes). With just 20 minutes total prep time, that leaves 10 minutes to spare.

EASY AS PIE: Ray is one of the sociable show hosts who's also handy with a grater.

"I don't wear a chef's coat; I don't wear an apron," she noted. "I don't do anything that separates people from thinking, 'Oh, I can so for sure do that.'"

Soon after launching on Nov. 23, 1993, the network had won a core audience of foodies.

"But we wanted to broaden our audience, to include viewers who wanted to see more than cooking in a studio. So we ... introduced more entertaining programming in a variety of formats," said Girard.

Currently Food Network airs a technique-based "In the Kitchen" block during the day that includes such programs as "Semi-Homemade Cooking with Sandra Lee" and "$40 a Day." New entries arriving next month will include "Low Carb and Lovin' It" and "Calorie Commando."

"The implied promise of the network is that we'll teach you how to cook," says Girard. "But we try to have a show that caters to every interest in food, even if you don't cook at all."

And even if you don't cook but think you might, there's a show for you: "How to Boil Water." So have courage. It will probably turn out fine. FRAZIER MOORE (AP)

What About Bob? Schneider at Birchmere

As an eclectic musician and an Austin, Texas, folk hero, Bob Schneider has played everything from funk to pop to jam-band trance-rock. Tonight, he'll probably play songs from his folkish new album "Now I'm Good," but with Schneider, no bet is a safe bet.

Rock's Wandering Star

MUSIC | Patti Smith may have matured from rock's rebel poet into a patron saint of all dissident music, but she still clings tenaciously to values she embodied from the beginning. For her, rock remains the bearer of a utopian vision, an engine of inspiration, a rallying cry for community and action.

"Trampin'" (Columbia), her first album in four years, opens with "Jubilee," a measured stomp in which Smith, sporting an almost Appalachian twang, sounds the alarm about the clouds of oppression gathering against the spirit of love and liberty.

Smith's language here and elsewhere is peppered with archaisms — "What be troubling you?" "And I'll rise every morn to tend to thee" — that link her to the tradition of American religious music, culminating in the title song, a vintage spiritual that closes the album on a spare, uplifting note.

But Smith isn't limited to one language, and "Trampin'" is anchored by two epic song-poems of the sort she pioneered in the mid-'70s — freely structured tribal incantations, with the instruments slowly falling in, feeling for a shape and building up steam behind Smith's urgent delivery. The titles suggest what these two pieces are about: "Ghandi" and "Radio Baghdad."

"Trampin'," which also includes some tender reveries as recounted by a woman observing her daughter, is not a flashy album, and sometimes what's meant to be stately is sluggish instead. But though the revolutionary jolt of her early work is in abeyance, her fire still burns. RICHARD CROMELIN (LOS ANGELES TIMES)

WORKING FOR THE MAN: And on the Third Day, He created devotional rock 'n' roll.

Hallowed Be Thy Profits

ON THE RISE | At a time when the music industry is struggling, praise and worship music is thriving.

During the past several years, the genre has expanded beyond church pews to dominate Christian radio, has sold briskly at retail and has launched several popular series.

The labels Vineyard, Maranatha and Integrity have long been the backbone of the praise and worship community. In recent years, major companies like EMI Christian Music Group and Provident Music Group have made successful forays into the market.

Most praise and worship albums used to be live recordings of church services led by a worship leader. Consumers bought these projects based on the featured songs and on the reputation of the labels.

But recently, contemporary Christian acts like Third Day, Michael W. Smith, the Newsboys, CeCe Winans and John Tesh have taken over the job of worship leader by recording praise and worship albums.

Praise and worship music seems to know no boundaries. Audiences span multiple generations, younger consumers are becoming fans and retail is acknowledging that broad-based appeal. There are youth-oriented modern worship albums, more traditional concept-driven projects and Native American worship music.

Demetrus Stewart, president of Winans' PureSprings label, thinks the genre will continue to grow.

"It doesn't matter if someone is black or white, big church, small church — it is still [making an impact], because it's not about anything but God." DEBORAH EVANS

The Face Turns Away

END OF AN ERA | The Face, the pop-culture magazine that served as a beacon of cool throughout much of the 1980s and 1990s, is closing down because of poor sales, its publishers said Friday.

The 24-year-old monthly helped revolutionize the British magazine industry with its innovative design, glossy pictures and edgy take on music and fashion. But it suffered a sharp decline in circulation in recent years and attempts by owner Emap PLC to sell it failed.

The last issue of The Face, dated May 2004, appeared two weeks ago. Emap had previously said it was suspending publication after the May issue.

For almost 20 years after its launch in 1980, The Face played a leading role in predicting the musical and fashion trends of young people in Britain and beyond. The New Romantics, waif chic, the rave scene and Britpop were among the many movements that reached a mass audience via the magazine's elaborately designed pages and aloof, hip writing.

The Face was widely credited with launching the career of supermodel Kate Moss, who was featured on the magazine's distinctive red-topped front cover in 1990 at the age of 15.

It also helped promote fashion designer Vivienne Westwood in the 1980s. More recently, a cover picture of soccer star David Beckham confirmed his status as a style icon.

As well as influencing how people looked, the publication did much to change the appearance of the once drab British magazine, thanks to its groundbreaking use of graphic design and fashion spreads by avant-garde photographers. MICHAEL McDONOUGH (AP)

Long Live Hip-Hop's Queen

LIVE MUSIC | If 2001's "No More Drama" was evidence that soul-searching soul-songstress Mary J. Blige had finally found her center, 2003's "Love and Life" further proved that the R&B diva has not only learned to love herself but has also been ... um, loving someone else.

As of late, the P-Diddy-deemed "Queen of Hip-Hop Soul," coming to D.C. after a looong touring hiatus, has not hesitated to inform her public that she is — among other affirmations — happy, both personally and professionally.

Ladies, we all know what this means: Instead of her man cheating on her, he's cheating with her. ("So babe, you'll be the lonely barfly and I'll be the hot waitress ...")

Now, no one wants a lonely, miserable queen of anything. But in Mary J.'s case, happiness means you can't be sure what to expect at tonight's DAR Constitution Hall performance. Singles like "Love at First Sight" and "Not Today" from "Love and Life" aren't the troubled, heartache-filled melodies most Mary fans crave.

Contented or distraught, her vocals are always ready for a show;

Mary J. Blige's broken heart has healed, which is bad news for fans.

it's her mended heart that may or may not be into it.

But she's an emotional girl, so whatever her mood, it behooves D.C. to support Miss Mary, or it may be another 730 days (or worse) until she returns to the stage.

The good news is she brought along cute, single soul-crooners Musiq and Glenn Lewis, who are always handy for the man's point of view. DARONA WILLIAMS

Girls Gone Riled

What's a March for Women's Lives without some celebrity action? Showing up for Sunday's rally on the Mall were, from left, CAMRYN MANHEIM, CYBILL SHEPHERD, WHOOPI GOLDBERG, ASHLEY JUDD and CHRISTINE LAHTI. In characteristic questionable taste, Shepherd wore an outfit befitting a very angry beekeeper; she also carried a sign reading, "Too bad John Ashcroft's mother didn't believe in abortion" (at right, she brandishes a coat hanger). Judd's "This is what a feminist looks like" T-shirt was worn by herself, Manheim, Goldberg and Margaret Cho on the cover of Ms. magazine. (EXPRESS)

IRONIES

Repeat: Actors Are Not The Characters They Play

JEREMY LONDON, who plays assistant reverend Chandler Hampton on the WB's "7th Heaven," was arrested in Santa Ana, Calif., after motorists reported seeing him arguing with his girlfriend on the highway, officials said Friday. London, 31, who was taken into custody April 6 for investigation of vandalism, marijuana possession and driving with a suspended license, faces a May 6 arraignment, prosecutor Susan Schroeder said. He was released on bail following his arrest. (AP)

"I have never worked a day in my life without selling," said Estee Lauder.

DEATHS

Beauty Was Her Attitude

ESTEE LAUDER, who started out blending face creams in her kitchen and built her business into an international cosmetics empire, has died at age 97. Lauder died of cardiopulmonary arrest late Saturday at her home in Manhattan, said a spokeswoman. Her company placed 349 in the 2003 Fortune 500. "Beauty is an attitude," she once said. "There's no secret. Why are all brides beautiful? Because on their wedding day they care about how they look. There are no ugly women — only women who don't care or who don't believe they're attractive." (AP)

OMAROSA

You Can Wash Your Hair Again, America

"Apprentice" OMAROSA MANIGAULT-STALLWORTH has been cut from a Clairol commercial for Herbal Essences shampoo. According to a company statement, Clairol shot footage of Omarosa for a cameo in an upcoming commercial, but ultimately decided to part ways. Perhaps the company was swayed by fellow contestant and Omarosa enemy Erika Ventrini, who threatened to boycott Clairol products if the ad aired? Or maybe not. (EXPRESS)

GINA GERSHON, star of the IFC docu-series "Rocked With Gina Gershon," says she'd love to manage Playboy magazine. "I wish someone would buy it and I could run it," Gershon said recently. The 41-year-old actress said she was finally ready to pose for the magazine — until she learned about the type of layout the editors wanted to do. "Playboy used to be amazing. And they just are blowing it. ... It's cheesy now." (AP)

Letters

TO THE EDITOR

I THINK YOU MAY HAVE FOUND the picture of the year. On page 5 of Thursday's Express, a photo labeled "The Hounds of War" showed soldiers, guns, huddled refugees behind barbed wire and a dog that almost seems to be screaming in anguish. This photo could be applied to any war, anytime, anyplace. It's amazing what a camera can capture in 1/400th of a second. John Moore of the Associated Press really touched me with this moment in time.

WITH RESPECT to Ms. Sylvester and her cousin's reaction to President Bush's press conference (Letters, April 21), a veneer of smooth sound bites often covers a framework of lies held together with the glue of deceit. I much prefer the plain, unvarnished truth delivered by someone who makes a decision, stands by it (even if it becomes unpopular), and can be counted on not to change stands from one day to the next or to govern via polls. That is the material with which to build a platform. What they saw as "inept responses," I see as refreshing, unrehearsed candor.

D.C. Growth

From washingtonpost.com/liveonline

DR. STEPHEN FULLER, economist and professor of public policy at George Mason University, was online Friday to discuss development and growth in the Washington metropolitan area.

Do we usually see any changes in the economy of the city during an election year or are the changes so minute that we would not see a change, be it negative or positive?

The Washington-area economy is usually a little stronger in an election year because of the campaign organizations and their spending here. The offset is that Congress may get out of town early. When the presidency changes, there are other economic benefits.

You mentioned that administration changes are good for the economy. Can you be more specific?

There are about 2,000 jobs that the incoming president controls. Those appointees losing their jobs do not all leave Washington, perhaps only half do. So, the housing market is the major beneficiary but also the income and job base of the region benefits. New lobbyists and others related to changes in Congress also may add some to the normal economic growth in an election year.

You said D.C. is more like Los Angeles than New York. That's the first time I've heard that. You mean the way the metro area is laid out?

I mean its dependency on cars and its geographic spread. The Washington area covers 5,000 square miles, the District has 61. The spread-out nature of the area reflects that it did most of its growing since WWII when the car became the preferred way to get around. New York grew up around transit so transit helped shape the land-use patterns.
